What Is Classified Advertising?

Ask the next man you meet what is meant by "classified" advertising. Unless he's a newspaper or advertising man, or has had occasion to use the classified columns, the chances are five to one he'll tell you frankly that he doesn't quite know.

Well, that is the raison d'etre for this self-advertising on tha part of The Times. If every citizen of Washington realized the true value and power of classified advertising, The Times clasified columns would be swamped. Some people—those who have used this style of advertising-already know its force; but there are lots of folks who are unaware of the inexpensiveness and result-bringing qualities of the little, but mighty, Want Ad.

That's what classified advertising is-Want advertising. No matter what your Want may be--whether you wish to secure employment, get competent help, exchange a graphophone for a set of books, seek professional tuition, sell a house or buy an established business-classified advertising will put you in touch with the man or woman or opportunity you are searching for.

There are something like eighty different classifications under which Want Ads. are published in The Times-a scope that encompasses every possible human Want. And a Want Ad. in The Times has power-it "pulls" results. For The Times goes each evening into the homes of over 40,000 Washingtonians. That is a large audience, isn't it? Yes, and you can address that large audience collectively, individually, and resultfully through the "classi-
